

Why don't you call an all-party meet on freebies: SC to Centre

Dhananjay Mahapatra
@timesgroup.com

New Delhi: The Supreme Court on Wednesday suggested the Centre could call "an all-party meet to discuss the pros and cons of freebies and take a decision on how to curb it, if required".

CURBING POLL 'PROMISES'

A bench of CJNV Ramana and Justices Hima Kohli and CT Ravikumar told solicitor general Tushar Mehta, "Ultimately it is the political parties which make election-freebie promises and contest elections. Individuals do not matter in a party based democratic system. All parties, whether ruling or those in opposition, face the ground reality. Unless there is a unanimous decision to destroy the economy with freebies, as distinguished from welfare measures, no amount of laws and SC orders can stop it. It should be debated by all political parties. They can meet and decide by consensus what steps are needed to curb the growing tendency of freebies." Mehta replied it would be futile to attempt a consensus among political parties that compete with each other in the freebie sphere. "It is impossible to achieve any tangible result in an all-party meet when some parties are claiming it to be their fundamental right to announce freebies," he said.

Political parties have opposed the Supreme Court's suggestion on setting up an expert panel to examine regulatory mechanisms for freebies. Only the writ petitioners led by Ashwini Upadhyay and the Centre are agreeable to this suggestion.

The SC said he has suggested a broad-based panel that included representatives of every recognised national political party, taxpayers' associations, and the stressed sectors like power generation and industry associations.

The SC said if the government is keen to get the issue examined by an expert panel, "why does it not constitute a committee and get a report for initiation of debate in an appropriate form on freebies?"

The SC said, "Since the SC is seized of the issue, the government is committed to give full cooperation. Let a report from the SC constituted committee come and the pros and cons of freebies can be debated before any decision in this regard is taken."
